

Mike Bozung

Mike Bozung, of Portland, is the vice president of preconstruction for Centennial Electric in Lansing. He is a master electrician and electrical contractor with over 25 years of experience in estimating, planning, overseeing, and completing large-scale electrical installations. He is a non-bargaining member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW). After studying at Lansing Community College, he completed his electrical apprenticeship through the IBEW's National Joint Apprenticeship and Training program. Outside of his work in the construction industry, he is also the co-owner and operator of Bozung Farms, where he helps to farm 130 acres and manage a herd of 65 head of beef cattle.

Mike grew up on HomeWorks lines, and he has been a member of the Co-op for over 25 years. He and his wife, Jessica, live on their family farm with their three sons. Mike is an active member of St. Patrick's Parish in Portland, where he is a part of the men's fraternity group and the building & grounds committee. He has also formerly served as a member of the church's Summerfest committee and as the trap shooting coach for St. Patrick's School. In addition to his work with the church, he has served as a former delegate for the national convention of the National Electrical Contractors Association (NECA).

"I am running as a candidate for the board because I strongly believe in servant leadership and giving back to the community with your time and talents," he says. "I feel my career experience in both electrical inside and outside work will greatly benefit the Co-op and its members. I would bring a wealth of knowledge to the board on infrastructure construction and maintenance, strategic planning, cost budgeting, and sustainability planning. I would be honored to serve as the District 2 director and ask for your vote."
